K-12: Climatology lecture

May 1, 2008: The 66th annual Bownocker (pronounced like "bonn'-i-ker") award will be presented to Dr. James Hansen, renowned climatologist from NASA Goddard Institute for Space Studies and Columbia University.

The 4:00 p.m. technical lecture, titled, "How Sensitive is the Earth's Climate? Uh, oh" will be held in Room 100 of Mendenhall Laboratory on the Oval of OSU's Columbus campus. At 8:00 p.m., Dr. Hansen will present a general lecture, titled, "Climate Tipping Points: The Threat to the Planet", also in Mendenhall Lab.

These events are free and the public is invited. For a campus map, and a direct link to parking information, go to: <http://www.osu.edu/map/building.php?building=054>
